Wildfire contained

Southern Sask. Officials assessing damage, trying to find cause of blaze at Grasslands National Park

Emergency crews scrambled on Sunday to keep a massive fire contained in a southern Saskatchewan national park, after it had raged out of control earlier on the weekend.

The wildfire had stretched across an estimated 25 kilometres at Grasslands National Park near Val Marie, pushed on Saturday by strong winds that fuelled its flames and kept approximately 200 firefighters at the national, provincial and local levels on the run.

"It was pretty spectacular," Duane McKay, provincial commissioner of emergency management and fire safety, said on Sunday of what had become a wall of flames at the park, about 160 kilometres southeast of Swift Current.

"It was anywhere from 10 to 15 miles long. The fire was fed by some significant winds, around 60 kilometres an hour.… It travelled a pretty good distance, and in a very short period of time."

Adding to the challenge for Parks Canada staff and other crews, he explained, was the course of the inferno "across the park into the coulees, and into some pretty rough country."

While McKay said the blaze was "pretty much" contained by Sunday, officials were trying to assess the damage it had caused and determine how much land it had scorched.

"There might be damage to fences inside," he said of the park, adding that the fire fortunately missed the site's campground.

"No homes were lost, but there could be some buildings in the park that might have been damaged. The park will do an assessment in the next couple of days."

The fire's cause hadn't been determined. In addition to finding out how it had started, McKay explained, the task of officials and their crews is "to make sure that if the weather changes and the winds come up again, there won't be an extension to the fire."

Floodwater covers sections of highways

Restrictions have been lifted on some highways near Moose Jaw after floodwater — some of it a few feet deep — began covering roads and hampering travel Friday.

Run-off has covered stretches of several rural roads and highways across southern Saskatchewan, said Duane McKay, provincial commissioner of emergency management, "but nothing that's causing significant hardship to individuals at this particular point."

Officials advise motorists to use the provincial Highway Hotline, at highways.gov.sk.ca for road updates. METRO

City to look at skateboard park locations

Regina city councilor Shawn Fraser will introduce a motion at Monday's city council meeting to give the city's administration the task of finding a new location for an indoor skateboard park.

A deal between the city and SK 8 Regina Association Inc. allowed for a skate park at an 8,000-square-foot facility at Evraz Place.

The building, however, is due for demolition while a new facility has not yet been found. The motion asks that possible new locations be suggested in a report to be filed at the July 8 meeting of council. METRO

Thousand of participants tackle 13.1-mile route

On Sunday, while springtime was running through the minds of many Reginans, some Reginans took the time to run through spring.

The Regina Police Service Half-Marathon brought about 1,000 participants out for an unseasonably brisk late April race.

"It is supposed to be spring, it doesn't feel like spring," said Patti Sandison-Cattell, director for the race. "But you know, the weather isn't that much different from other years. We just aren't used to seeing so much of this white stuff around."

The race's course was altered to include more roadways and less park pathways due to snow and the possibility of flooding. The route went from Douglas Park to the University of Regina and back, a trek just shy of 22 kilometres.

The half-marathon has become an unofficial kick-off to Regina's running season.

"We started it 10 years ago to have a small community event that the police could spearhead and be involved in, and it has grown," said Sandison-Cattell. "This year we cut it (registration) off at 1,000 runners and the event sold out in six days."

Added to the race was a tribute to the victims of the Boston Marathon bombings that occurred earlier this month.

"We had a moment of silence before we kicked off the race, and there were a couple of runners with us this morning who also ran Boston," said Sandison-Cattell.

"We also provided blue ribbons for all the runners out there today as a way of saying that Regina remembers Boston."

The first few runners of about 1,000 participants burst out of the starting gate in Regina on Sunday for the city police service's half-marathon. JEFF MACKEY/METRO

Fire breaks out amid rescue efforts at factory in Bangladesh

Collapsed garment plant. Blaze injures rescue workers attempting to cut through a steel rod to free a trapped woman

A fire broke out late Sunday in the wreckage of the garment factory that collapsed last week in Bangladesh, with smoke pouring from the piles of shattered concrete and some of the rescue efforts forced to stop.

The fire came four days after the collapse, as rescuers were trying to free a woman they found trapped in the rubble. The flames broke out when sparks were generated by those rescuers trying to cut through a steel rod to reach the woman, said Syed Al-Amin Roman, a volunteer rescuer. At least three rescue workers were injured in the fire, he said.

Rescuers have retreated from the part of the wreckage where the fire erupted, but were still trying to reach any possible survivors in other parts of the destroyed eight-storey building.

Firefighters were frantically hosing down the flames.

"Hopefully we will be able to control it," said Brig. Gen. Mohammed Siddiqul Alam Shikder, who is overseeing rescue operations.

It wasn't immediately clear what happened to the trapped woman.

The fire came hours after the owner of the illegally-constructed building was captured Sunday at a border crossing with India.

Mohammed Sohel Rana was arrested in Benapole in western Bangladesh, just as he was about to flee into India's West Bengal state, said Jahangir Kabir Nanak, junior minister for local government. Rana was brought back by helicopter to the capital Dhaka where he faced charges of negligence.

In the Playroom: Kids reenacting tragic stories

In one of Jonathan Hobin's newest provocative photographs, GOT HIM!, a marine with a toy gun shoots Osama bin Laden in a messy ketchup-blood scene beside a kitchen fridge. JONATHAN HOBIN/THE CANADIAN PRESS

For Picasso's masterpiece Guernica, it was the German bombing of a Spanish town. For Ottawa art photographer Jonathan Hobin's Twins, it was 9/11.

Current events have always inspired art, and Hobin's latest instalment in his controversial series In the Playroom is an arresting modern example.

Each of his photos depicts children at play re-enacting tragic public events.

Hobin, 33, has portrayed familiar stories, such as a Halloween-inspired Abu Ghraib prison scene, a portrait of the late North Korean dictator Kim Jong-il and JonBenét Ramsey dressed in a pageant gown, among others.

He says the child models in his photographs are unpaid volunteers, and are either the children of friends and family, or models from agencies.

"I definitely would never have photographed a child unless I fully communicated what I was going to do," he said in an interview.

Parents "had to believe in what I was doing if I was going to photograph their child."

The idea for the series came after Hobin witnessed the repeated and unforgettable images of the planes striking the World Trade Center towers on 9/11.

"I started to think: 'I'm an adult and I can kind of handle what that means,'" he said.

"But with someone who is not as equipped as I am with problem-solving or just life experiences, how are they going to see that sort of thing? How are they going to comprehend what that means?"

THE CANADIAN PRESS

Processing violence

Asked whether he would depict the recent Boston Marathon bombings, Hobin said such events need time to play out in the culture before he can consider reflecting the stories visually.

- "It took probably about six or seven years before I did the 9/11 attacks. You kind of let the dust settle and see how it plays out," he said.

Boston. FBI investigating whether bombing suspects got training: Lawmaker

The FBI is investigating in the United States and overseas to determine whether the suspects in the Boston Marathon bombing received training that helped them carry out the attack, the chairman of the U.S. House Homeland Security Committee said Sunday.

Rep. Michael McCaul spoke a day after U.S. officials disclosed that Russian authorities secretly recorded a telephone conversation in 2011 in which one of the two brothers suspected in the attack, Tamerlan Tsarnaev, vaguely discussed jihad with his mother.

The father of the Tsarnaev brothers, meanwhile, said from Russia on Sunday he is postponing a trip to the U.S. because of poor health.

Tsarnaev, 26, died in a police shootout. His younger brother, 19-year-old Dzhokhar, is charged with setting off the shrapnel-packed pressure-cooker bombs near the finish line of the Boston Marathon on April 15. Three people were killed and more than 260 were injured.

U.S. officials investigating the bombings have told The Associated Press that so far there is no evidence to date of a wider plot, including training, direction or funding for the attacks.

The bombs were triggered by a remote detonator of the kind used in remote-control toys, U.S. officials have said.

Rejected. Prison interview with Omar Khadr overruled by the feds

A federal cabinet minister rejected a request for a prison interview with former Guantanamo Bay detainee Omar Khadr even though the warden gave it a green light — a move some are denouncing as extraordinary political interference.

Documents obtained by The Canadian Press under the Access to Information Act show the warden of Millhaven Institution, where Khadr is in maximum security, approved the interview request made by the news agency in January, only to be overruled.

The refusal came from the office of Public Safety Minister Vic Toews to Correctional Service Canada, records show.

Under normal procedure, the warden of an institution makes the final call on granting a reporter access to an inmate, subject to a CSC policy known as Commissioner's Directive 022.

Among other things, the directive requires agreement from the prisoner to talk to the reporter, and any interview cannot pose a security threat.

The documents show Prime Minister Stephen Harper's own department immediately flagged the initial interview application, and asked to be kept in the loop.

"We'd be interested if anything develops on the (request)," Christopher Williams, a senior analyst with Privy Council Office, wrote in an email to Correctional Service Canada.

In this case, Millhaven Warden Kevin Snedden approved a telephone interview with Khadr. Documents show regional headquarters supported his decision.

2 officers shot outside Italian PM's office

Target. Shooting comes as Italy's new government is sworn in

An unemployed bricklayer shot two Italian policemen in a crowded square outside the prime minister's office in Rome on Sunday just as Italy's new government was being sworn in, investigators said.

The gunman's intended target was politicians, but none were in the square so he shot at the Carabinieiri paramilitary police, Rome Prosecutor Pierfilippo Laviani told reporters, citing what he said were the suspect's own words.

Mired in recession and suffering from soaring unemployment, Italy has been in political paralysis since an inconclusive February election. Social and political tensions have been running high among voters divided between centre-left, conservative and anti-government political parties.

Sunday was supposed to be a hopeful day when the debt-ridden nation finally got a new government to solve its many problems. But shots rang out in Piazza Colonna near a busy shopping and strolling area shortly after 11:30 a.m., just as Prime Minister Enrico Letta and his new ministers were taking their oaths at the Quirinal presidential office about a kilometre away.

The shooting panicked tourists and locals in the square, whose centerpiece is a towering, second-century ancient Roman column honouring Emperor Marcus Aurelius. Rome was packed Sunday with people enjoying the last day of a four-day weekend. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Building explosion kills at least three in France

A possible gas explosion ripped off the side of a five-storey residential building in France's Champagne country on Sunday, killing at least three people and injuring 14 others, officials said. More than 100 rescue workers, firefighters, sniffer-dog squads and bomb-and-gas experts were deployed to the gutted building in a subsidized housing complex in the city of Reims, east of Paris, officials said. Heaps of debris spilled out of the building onto a grassy esplanade below. "The explosion of a residential building in Reims is a terrible drama," the office of French President Francois Hollande said in a statement, conveying his condolences to the victims' relatives. Michel Bernard, the top government official in Reims, said crews searching for survivors turned up the body of a woman under the rubble Sunday afternoon, raising the death toll to three. He said it was unlikely that the toll would rise any higher. JACQUES BRINON/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LIKE ROYALTY

Dozens of people were at South Korea's Busan train station Friday to greet visiting Korean War veterans including Canadian John Stuber who received a hug from Pastor Won Seong-Jae

It was an emotional roller-coaster for 36 Canadian veterans visiting Korea this past week to commemorate 60 years since they voluntarily went to war to defend the South Korean people.

One moment they were on a tour bus singing a traditional Korean song just as they did 60 years ago. The next, they were wiping tears from the corners of their eyes at the gravesite of their fallen comrades.

Yet what remained constant throughout the five-day trip was the utmost gratitude and respect the Korean people have for the Canadian forces who served there.

The Korean government once again invited and covered the majority of the cost to host them for a revisit program, which saw veterans returning to former battlegrounds and memorials dispersed throughout the country. Canada's Veterans Affairs Minister Steven Blaney accompanied the veterans on the trip.

The Canadian government covered the portion of the trip not paid by the Republic of Korea.

From day one Korean youth donning light blue vests tended to their every need, whether it was pushing them in wheelchairs or rushing to help them disembark the bus.

To put it simply, they were treated like royalty.

That gratitude extended to the general public as well. Dozens of Korean youth waving flags and saying a collective "thank you" surprised the veterans in a touching welcoming on Friday at the train station in Busan.

The delegation travelled to the port city on their final day of the program to the United Nations Memorial Cemetery, which is the final resting ground for 375 Canadians who fought in the Korean War. JOE LOFARO/METRO

Iraq blocks Al-Jazeera following wave of unrest

Iraqi authorities announced Sunday that they had revoked the operating licences of pan-Arab broadcaster Al-Jazeera and nine other satellite TV channels, alleging that they are promoting a sectarian agenda as the country grapples with a wave of violence.

The move, effective immediately, comes as Baghdad tries to quell rising unrest in the country following clashes at a protest camp last week.

More than 180 people have been killed in gun battles with security forces and other attacks since the unrest began Tuesday. The violence follows more than four months of largely peaceful protests by Iraq's Sunni Muslim minority against the Shiite-dominated government.

Al-Jazeera, based in Qatar, said it was "astonished" by the move.

"We cover all sides of the stories in Iraq, and have done for many years. The fact that so many channels have been hit all at once though suggests this is an indiscriminate decision," it said in an emailed statement.

The channel has aggressively covered the Arab Spring uprisings across the region, and has broadcast extensively on the civil war in neighbouring Syria. Qatar itself is a harsh critic of the Syrian regime and a leading backer of the rebels, and is accused by many supporters of Iraq's Shiite-led government of backing protests in Iraq too.

Algeria. President's mini-stroke could mean wide open elections

The mini-stroke suffered by Algeria's president has cast fresh doubt on his perceived ambition to run for a fourth term next year as leader of one of Africa's largest and richest countries.

The possibility that President Abdelaziz Bouteflika, 76, could step down might open up Algeria's long-stagnant politics.

Bouteflika on Saturday had a brief blockage of a cerebral blood vessel known as a transient ischemic attack, which authorities said he quickly recovered from and had no lasting complications.

Bouteflika was elected in 1999 to a country that had been savaged by years of civil war with Islamists. He is widely credited with ending the war and putting the country back on its feet, aided by soaring energy prices.

Syria. Alleged chemical use fits pattern of slow introduction, experts say

The instances in which chemical weapons are alleged to have been used in Syria were purportedly small in scale.

That raises the question of who would stand to gain as President Bashar Assad's regime and the opposition trade blame for the alleged attacks. Analysts say the regime has a pattern of gradually introducing a weapon to the conflict to test the international community's response.

Syria's government says opposition fighters have used chemical agents in a bid to frame it. But using chemical weapons to try to force foreign intervention would be a huge gamble and would undoubtedly taint the rebellion in the eyes of the international community and seriously strain its credibility.

Who's the space cadet on the new $5 bill?

Funny money. Dextre, Canada's extraterrestrial robotic go-to guy, rockets to fame on plastic notes — leaving focus groups scratching their heads

The Bank of Canada is set to unveil its latest plastic bank notes this week — but documents show some people found one of the new bills too "cartoonish" and the other too old-fashioned.

Focus groups consulted about the proposed images for the new bank note series thought the space motif of the new $5 bill looked childish.

"There is a perception that the note looks 'cartoonish' or too child-like," says a 2009 report commissioned by the bank from The Strategic Counsel, obtained by The Canadian Press under the Access to Information Act.

Others were left scratching their heads over the depiction of Dextre, a Canadian robotic handyman on board the International Space Station. Some people wrongly assumed Dextre was the name of an astronaut shown on the bill, while others had no clue who the name referred to.

"Dextre is not recognized — although once explained, it is accepted as an element of Canada's contribution to space technology that should be kept," the report says.

"The image of the space station is not recognized. It is confused with a concept drawing."

But if some people were stumped by the space-age technology on the $5 bill, others complained the train on the new $10s looked too quaint.

Climate change. EPA reduces estimate of methane leaks during natural gas production

The Environmental Protection Agency in the U.S. has dramatically lowered its estimate of how much of a potent heat-trapping gas leaks during natural gas production, in a shift with major implications for a debate that has divided environmentalists: Does the recent boom in fracking help or hurt the fight against climate change?

Oil and gas drilling companies had pushed for the change, but there have been differing scientific estimates of the amount of methane that leaks from wells, pipelines and other facilities during production and delivery. Methane is the main component of natural gas.

The new EPA data is "kind of an earthquake" in the debate over drilling, said Michael Shellenberger, the president of the Breakthrough Institute, an environmental group based in Oakland, Calif. "This is great news for anybody concerned about the climate and strong proof that existing technologies can be deployed to reduce methane leaks." THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Bitcoin dealers navigating uncharted financial waters

Canadians buying and selling an emerging digital currency are running afoul of established banks and operating in uncharted territory for financial regulators.

"The Canadian government doesn't know what a Bitcoin is, doesn't recognize the Bitcoin, and there's no regulatory agency that knows what a Bitcoin is," said Joseph David, the owner of VirtEx.

His Calgary-based website lets Canadians trade Bitcoins through an online market similar to a stock exchange. David said the two-year-old company facilitated $15 million in transactions this year.

But the company is one of several Bitcoin dealers struggling to navigate financial regulations that don't account for virtual currencies, and to cope with major banks shutting down their accounts without explanation.

Earlier this month, the Royal Bank of Canada closed VirtEx's account, along with the bank account of an Ottawa-based Bitcoin dealer.

"Anti-money laundering policy is a big thing, and that's what banks are concerned about," said James Grant, the owner of Canadian Bitcoins in Ottawa.

"Our problem is that we're not laundering money."

ANYONE SEEN THE SPRING SWITCH?

URBAN COMPASS

Paul Sullivan
regina@metronews.ca

Once more, with snow.

It's official. Environment Canada has declared this the coldest spring in Saskatchewan in 113 years.

And it's not over yet. Those meteorological madmen are forecasting more snow over the next couple of days before we finally get to some nice weather toward the end of the week.

It's hard to believe, but those same sadists predict May and June will be warmer than normal.

Very hard to believe.

Fortunately, Saskatchewan refuses to lose its faith. Like the first robin, the intrepid folks at the Landing Golf Resort near Swift Current aren't waiting around for some vague promise of warmth and opened the course over the weekend. Nearly a full month after last year, but they opened the course. It's theoretically possible to go golfing, at least if there's not another freaking blizzard…

This time of year, Mother Nature often switches on spring with a casual flip. Possible snow today, possible plus 20 and sunny by the end of the week. Relief is tantalizingly near.

Just keep in mind that "possible" works both ways.

If you're looking for a reason that this has been the coldest spring in 113 years, you need only look south, where the warm American air was halted at the border by a high-pressure system drooping down from the Arctic like a giant icicle and blocking its entrance.

The Giant Icicle Effect is coupled with the Smothering Blanket of Snow Syndrome: The fact that there is more snow on the ground at this time of year than ever before and snow reflects sunlight, preventing it from warming up the cold, cold ground.

You'd be forgiven for believing that the weather gods have it in for Saskatchewan. The average temperature in March and April has been -8.9 C. That's 12 degrees less than it was last year! Is that even possible?

There is a glass-half-full perspective on this, if you're thirsty for good news: It was after all, 12 degrees warmer last year. It could be 12 degrees warmer again next year. This could be a freak season, the likes of which won't be seen again for 113 years.

113-year cycle?

If you're thirsty for good news: It was after all, 12 degrees warmer last year. It could be 12 degrees warmer again next year. This could be a freak season, the likes of which won't be seen again for 113 years.

Apart from the cockeyed optimists, the weather is warming the cold-blooded hearts of the creatures at iceagenow.com, who believe we're on the verge of a winter that will last 11,500 years, despite whatever those misguided climate scientists try to tell us about global warming. Scary thought.

Let's just hope Mother Nature remembers where to find the spring switch and flips it on, preferably before the weekend.

Q and A

A microcosm of North Korea

ILYA PITALEV
Photographer for RIA Novosti news agency, 42, from Moscow

How did you capture this striking juxtaposition?
The shot was taken inside Kim Il-sung Stadium. When the crowds first caught my eye, I could simply make out a geometric line dividing the people in two. There and then, I didn't think it was some profound or philosophical photograph — above all, it was a good, visual shot. But then after some time, I began to understand that the image reveals something about the country and its society.

What would you tell the world about North Korea?
That people there have their own celebrations in life and can find happiness. But they exist in a separate world, difficult for understanding from outside the country.

@Pundamentalism:
With puns such as, "Damn girl, you must be an English teacher, because when you're around I'm careful with the use of my colon," and, "If Satan loses his hair, there'll be Hell toupée," and other updates that vary between LQTMS and LOL, for example, "Thank-you for calling the Chronic Indecisiveness helpline. Please select one of the following 15 options," there isn't room for the mundane.

@SixthFormPoet:
If you can relate to self-deprecating humour with some intermittent cheesiness spliced into the mix, the Sixth Form Poet is just for you. With gems like , "'I'll have what she's having.' - Me, watching a woman having a nervous breakdown," and "'Never Eat Stolen Wheat.' - Moral compass," it's no wonder there is an entire book comprised of these jokes.

Don Cherry said the men's locker-room is no place for a woman during his weekly Coach's Corner segment on Hockey Night in Canada Saturday night while discussing the controversy around Chicago Blackhawks defenceman Duncan Keith (whose comments to a female reporter have been called sexist).
Naturally, fans took to Twitter to comment. What's your stance? Let @metropicks know.

@therealmcguirkk: don cherry bang on with his comments last night... imagine a male reporter in a female changeroom with naked women..oh the atrocity #feminazi

@Jare_Bear16: Rons face when don says women shouldnt be in the changeroom.. lmao

@mrcanadiantech: Looks like Don Cherry said something again, but I have to agree with him on this one.

Two and a Half Men losing cast?

CBS announced on Twitter last Friday that it's bringing Two and a Half Men back next season, but didn't address whether the full cast would return. The series stars Ashton Kutcher, Jon Cryer and Angus T. Jones as Cryer's son. Jones' character is serving in the Army this season and has been somewhat less visible on Two and a Half Men.

NBC renews five dramas

Television producer Dick Wolf will be busy next year. NBC said Friday that it has renewed five of its dramas for next season. Two of them — the long-running Law & Order: Special Victims Unit and Chicago Fire — are made by Wolf and his team. Revolution, Parenthood and Grimm were also given the guarantee that they will go on for another year.

More Skinnygirl headed our way

Bethenny Frankel plans to expand her Skinnygirl line of wine and spirits and power bars to include more food products. "You'll definitely see Skinnygirl food," the former reality TV star said in a recent interview. "If it's something that I'm passionate about, if it's something that solves a problem for women in particular because that's who I connect with the most, and (it's) any product that I can improve upon or any problem that I can solve, then Skinnygirl will be attached to that."

Panic Button premieres Tuesday on Space. HANDOUT

Who's afraid of a big, bad show?

Panic Button. New series pits people against their primal fears — and the only prize is bragging rights

What is your deepest, darkest innermost fear?

Participants come face-to-face with what scares them most in Panic Button, which premieres Tuesday at 10 p.m. ET on Space.

Volunteers are outfitted in red jumpsuits and helmets and invited to wander through a Big-Brother-style house of horrors in an environment that is Saw scary. Besides all manner of psychological terror, including being blindfolded, confined in tight spaces and wading through muck, they also have to endure live snakes, spiders and rats.

It all takes place in what was — appropriately enough — once a slaughterhouse in Toronto's West End.

This too-much-reality series features many slasher film motifs. Stark white rooms with No Exit stencilled on the wall above the entranceway give way to darkened, creepy corridors littered with hoses, wires and ankle-deep swill. At one point, players are confined in a standup metal booth the size of a coffin, which is then pushed through a wall of flames.

That's the easy part. Then the critters are unleashed. In some episodes, even Dobermans.

"This is psychotic," says one woman who braved her way to level three.

A disclaimer at the end tells viewers that "No harm was done to any animal" during the course of production. But what about the humans?

Players are given red, lit panic buttons they wear on their suits and can push the second it all gets too intense. The surprise in the pilot is who slaps theirs first and who holds out until the bitter end.

The strength of the series is all in the power of suggestion, says Jonathan Dueck (Destination Fear), one of two producers who gave reporters a walking tour of the creepy set.

Dueck explained that a disembodied voice (sounding like a woman with a slight British accent) gives participants seconds to follow commands. People are blindfolded and stripped of cellphones. Fifty per cent of the participants don't get past the first maze.

Women, reports fellow producer Kevin Healey (Scare Tactics), are more likely to be brave and proceed farther into the maze. Men are generally fraidy cats. "Guys are falling like fall leaves," says Healey.

There is a disturbing kinkiness to some scenes. Women are shown shackled in Plexiglas cages, arms in chains. A smaller Plexiglas box is lowered onto one woman's head. Snakes are then dumped into the box, slithering around her neck and right before her eyes.

Five participants in the first episode, between ages 19 and 31, are reduced to screaming swear machines as they wander about in the darkness. One is a music teacher afraid of snakes, another an amusement ride operator who hates rats.

One man, Kayvon, is a pharmaceutical sales rep described as "an ultra-competitive alpha male." He takes the challenge despite being "scared of bunny rabbits." One woman says she is doing this to prove to her young niece that she's "no scaredy cat."

All say they are doing this to overcome fears, but most must leave with vivid new nightmares. This series should be sponsored by an adult diaper company.

Panic prerequisites

Participants are carefully tested and screened; people with heart conditions need not apply. All sign disclaimers the size of phone books. In what might be the scariest news of all, there is no prize money awarded for making it all the way through this chamber of horrors. "People just like to test their limits," says Healey, who sees his show as one big, psychological testing ground. "There are bragging rights to say you confronted your deepest fear and conquered it."

Justin Bieber and Selena Gomez. ALL PHOTOS GETTY IMAGES

Bieber and Gomez continue to play up their reconciliation

In what has to be the surest sign yet that Justin Bieber and Selena Gomez have rekindled their romance, the Canadian pop star posted a photo to Instagram over the weekend of himself hunched shirtless over his laptop with a squinty-eyed Gomez cosying up behind him, arms around his midsection.

And the caption his chose for the revealing photo he shared?

"'You've been makin' music for too long, babe. Come cuddle' — her."

And there's further speculation about just how long they've been back together, as the picture was taken before Bieber acquired the tiger tattoo on his bicep he debuted last week.

OUR TAKE ON THE WORLD OF CELEBRITIES

The Word

McGowan is letting her hairstyle go to her head

THE WORD
Dorothy Robinson
scene@metronews.ca

The newly platinum blonde actress Rose McGowan says her look is giving her a toughness she didn't have before.

"Part of (going blonde) is because I've been told (brunettes) look accessible and pleasing to the men in L.A. so as not to scare them. But then I realized I always scare them so f— it — I'm just going to do whatever I want and I've always wanted short platinum blonde hair so screw it....The men in Hollywood aren't men — they're guys like (whispers) Judd Apatow."

McGowan says this last part while making a face to suggest that Apatow doesn't chop his own wood, and adds, "Real men are hard to come by."

McGowan is so fierce during our recent interview on the Rooftop Terrace at Gramercy Park Hotel, it is hard to believe that the whole point in her talking to me is to promote the limited edition rose wine, Apothic Rose.

"I only drink Rosé, isn't that funny?" she says in a way that makes me feel it isn't contractually obligated. "I like it ghetto style — I usually pop an ice cube in it to chill it and take the sweetness out of it."

If you can't tell by now, McGowan isn't afraid to let loose on the current battle of the sexes in Hollywood.

"It's all frat guys; they condone sexism. The execs and the agents. They are people who went to law school and it wasn't sexy enough ... It's not like they want to be a part of great film making or anything," she said.

Martha Stewart finds online dating to be half baked

Martha Stewart once turned to online dating site Match.com to help her find a boyfriend — but she couldn't go through with it.

"I started laughing halfway down the page," she tells Matt Lauer in an interview. "It was, like, impossible."

But Stewart insists, at least, that if she does go through with an online dating profile, she wouldn't hide her identity.

"I want to do my real thing," she says.

Book

Drunk Mom tells painful story

As the mother of a newborn, Jowita Bydlowska justified her drinking as research for a novel about alcoholism. The final result? A memoir about her own struggles with addiction.

Drunk Mom (Random House, $22.95) is an agonizing catalogue of Bydlowska's drunken parenting failures, filled with excruciating details like the fact that she kept a secret stash of bottles in her son's sock drawer.

"I'm told that I have a dark sense of humour," says Bydlowska. "I don't know if I did it consciously, but you need a bit of relief."

She also writes with piercing honesty about using Google to determine if her breast milk was safe to drink, hiding bottles of vodka in her son's stroller and fighting with her partner, author and newspaper columnist Russell Smith.

After three and a half years of sobriety, Bydlowska had a drink at a friend's wedding in Warsaw before she knew she was pregnant.

She relapsed into full-blown alcoholism with a glass of champagne following the birth of her son.

She does wonder about what her son will think when he reads the book. "I certainly have this idea of him being a 13- or 14-year-old and throwing it at the wall," she says.

"My hope is that he'll read it with an open mind and an open heart. It's a memoir, but it's also a form of (making) amends."

What to expect when you're expecting after the age of 35

Pregnancy. Dr. Glade Curtis is a national authority on pregnancy. Now he turns his knowledge to the mid-30s set

NATALIE SHURE
Metro World News in New York City

As author of 18 books on women's and baby's health, Dr. Glade Curtis is a national authority on pregnancy.

A newly revised edition of Your Pregnancy: After 35 is the latest addition to the authoritative Your Pregnancy: Week by Week series, co-authored by consumer and family studies expert Judith Schuler.

The updates are geared toward an ever-increasing proportion of women who choose to have children in their mid- 30s and beyond.

What did you consider when updating this book?
I think it's critical, when people want information about their health and pregnancy, that the information is up-to-date. I looked at every part of it to add new information, including how the science has changed. I think one of the more exciting areas for this population of pregnant women is all of the things we're learning about genetics and genetic counseling.

What are the best parts about pregnancy at this age?
They're more informed, and they're more aware of potential risks and problems. They have taken good care of themselves — if you compare that to an 18-year-old who wasn't trying to get pregnant, then it becomes clear that we don't need to be scared to death of these pregnancies.

What do women find most useful about this book?
The most important thing is being armed with accurate information so that when they visit their doctors they can ask the appropriate questions. The other thing is reassurance. For any woman and any couple, being pregnant is scary — the book reassures women that these are normal things that are happening.

Women who are older than 35 are more aware of the potential risks that come with pregnancy. ISTOCK

What are some of the field's most important new medical advances?
One of the most exciting advances is all that has happened in ultrasound technology. Ultrasound has gotten so good, there are so many things we can do to evaluate the baby and help with the pregnancy.

What should expectant couples keep in mind during a pregnancy?
I think it's always important to remember to enjoy the miracle of birth. So, make sure you enjoy the excitement, the fun and the miracle of having a baby.

If you're having trouble conceiving, you're not alone.

Women's health expert Dr. Donnica L. Moore, a spokesperson for the Clearblue ovulation test, says that some problems in conceiving can be avoided. She and Dr. Victoria Maizes, author of Be Fruitful: The Essential Guide to Maximizing Fertility and Giving Birth to a Healthy Child gave us a preconception checklist.

Be patient
"Women erroneously think that once they stop taking birth control — voila! They will become pregnant. It can happen, but generally the hormones have to settle down," says Moore.

Mark your calendar
"There are four or five days when a woman is most likely to conceive," says Moore. "The time of ovulation and a few days before is when couples need to plan to have intercourse. That's where Clearblue come in. It checks the LH surge (a rise in luteinizing hormone, which happens right before ovulation starts)."

Enjoy sex
"Procreational sex is very different from recreational sex and it puts a lot of stress on couples. That stress makes you less likely to want to have sex, and it becomes a cycle," says Moore.

There are four or five days when a woman is most likely to conceive. ISTOCK

Ditch low-fat dairy — really!
"Whole-fat dairy products are associated with a lower risk of infertility. This may be due to the way the hormonal balance shifts when we remove milk fat to make low-fat milk product," says Dr. Victoria Maizes.

Live Below the Line challenges people to live under the poverty line for five days, and to buy all the food and drink needed to survive during that time with just $8.75 a week or roughly $1.75 a day. Here are some recipes to help you take the challenge.

In the kitchen and below the line

life@metronews.ca

What do celebrities like Ben Affleck, Hugh Jackman, Canadian actor Ennis Esmer, Osman 'Oz' Bey of CTV's The Listener and Carrie-Lynn Neals of CityTv's Seed have in common with thousands of Canadians and Americans?

They're all taking part in the Live Below the Line challenge, during which participants spend just $8.75 a week or roughly $1.75 per day ($1.50 in the United States) on all daily food and drink from today to May 3.

The $1.75 per day mark is the Canadian equivalent of the poverty line and the goal of this challenge is to begin a national dialogue to change the way Canadians think about the choices made every day by those living in extreme poverty.

In addition to raising awareness by partaking in the challenge, Canadians are raising funds for four partner organizations: Cuso International, Spread the Net, RESULTS Canada and Raising the Village.

"Living on $1.75 per day is not about pretending to be poor," says Erin Deviney, Canadian campaign manager of Live Below the Line.

"It's about raising awareness of the difficult choices 1.4 billion people must make to survive each day and supporting partner organizations directly combating extreme poverty."

Chef John Placko of Modern Culinary Academy, one of Canada's top culinary consultants, and Christina Frantzis, a food stylist and recipe developer, have created recipes to help Canadians with the challenge.

Ingredients

- 100 g linguine
- 1/2 Italian sausage, casing removed
- 1 white mushroom, halved and sliced
- 1 tbsp tomato paste
- Pinch of dried oregano

Linguine with Sausage and Mushroom Ragout

This dish costs $0.64 per person to make. MARTHA WEBER

Linguine with Sausage and Mushroom Ragout

1. Fill a medium-sized pot with water and bring to boil. Cook pasta according to package instructions then drain.

2. Add sausage to small pan and break it up while sautéing over medium heat until almost no pink remains.

3. Slice mushroom and add to a pan. Cook over moderate heat until softened.

4. Stir in tomato paste and reserved cooking water into sausage mixture and simmer until reduced by half.

5. Add oregano and spoon sauce over pasta and enjoy.

CHRISTINA FRANTZIS, FOOD STYLIST AND RECIPE DEVELOPER

Breakfast. Apple Cinnamon Five-Grain Pancakes

These pancakes cost $0.56 per person to make. MARTHA WEBER

1. In a small bowl, add the water into the pancake mix. Stir gently then add in the cinnamon and apple until the mixture is smooth.

2. In a non-stick skillet over medium heat, ladle batter according to desired size.

3. Cook for 2 minutes or until bubbles form in the batter. Turn and cook for 1 to 2 minutes longer or until golden and puffed.

4. Dust finished pancakes with icing sugar and enjoy.

CHRISTINA FRANTZIS, FOOD STYLIST AND RECIPE DEVELOPER

Ingredients

- 3/4 cup water
- 3/4 cup 5-grain pancake mix
- 1/2 tsp ground cinnamon
- 1/4 cup apple, diced
- 1/2 tsp icing sugar

Quick Caramelized Onion & Potato Frittata

1. Heat the vegetable oil in a non-stick pan on medium heat and add the onion slices.

2. Stir with a wooden spoon while cooking for 8 to 10 minutes until golden brown.

3. Drain the cooked potato and add to the pan. Combine potato and onions.

4. Add the beaten and seasoned eggs to the pan and stir with the onions and potatoes until the eggs begin to set.

5. Leave the eggs to cook and firm up for 1-2 minutes.

6. Place the pan under a broiler/grill for 2 minutes.

7. Use a spatula to loosen the omelettes from the pan and slide onto your plate. Serve immediately.

CHEF JOHN PLACKO, CULINARY DIRECTOR AT MODERN CULINARY ACADEMY

Ingredients

- 1 tbsp of vegetable oil
- 1/2 of an onion, sliced thinly
- 1 small potato, diced small (1/4 inch), cooked in salted water

Y we could use some boomer wisdom

Take me to your senior. Learning from our elder leaders will only serve to benefit future business

YLVA VAN BUUREN
CareerBear.com

The knowledge gap in the corporate world will widen if retiring baby boomers continue to do little to mentor younger workers, says Donna Stevenson, a business coach and recruiter who's studied the issue.

The great web of work

- Career Bear is Canada's premier source for people who want a new career but aren't sure where to start.
- Visitors to the website can browse careers by industry, salary, outlook or alphabetical listing and find job profiles, quick career facts and training programs near them.

It is imperative that Gen Ys recognize the contribution of boomers, and by doing so they will hopefully pave the way for mutual respect. ISTOCK

Stevenson surveyed 100 senior leaders and human resource managers across the country who told her baby boomers are reluctant to share their workplace expertise.

"This failure to pass on the torch will leave wastelands of organizational know-how as 50 per cent of baby boomers prepare to retire over the next seven years."

Since many senior management positions are held by boomers, and since the next group, known as Generation X (those born in the early '60s to early '80s), is too small to pick up the slack, it will be left to Generation Y (those born after the early '80s to 2000s) to do so.

"I was under the impression Generation Y didn't want to learn and that's not true at all," says Stevenson. "They want to move ahead. What we're pitching is the need for organizations to have a leadership legacy."

Her research also found that less than 25 per cent of companies have succession planning in place.

The whys and the hows

Why are boomers less inclined to help younger workers? Here are four reasons that Stevenson's research identified, as well as how Gen Ys can overcome them and get a boomer boss to share their workplace expertise.

- Boomers fear not being needed anymore. Stevenson recommends younger employees use their technology related skills as bait. "Find boomers who are in roles you'd like and offer to help them learn social media skills, even if it's so they can communicate with their grandkids."
- Boomers lack the time and resources to mentor. Stevenson says what they're really saying is they don't know how to mentor. As a Gen Y employee trying to overcome this, get involved in a work project that will have a significant influence over the organization. By participating you're bound to at least pick up pointers from senior staff and perhaps even plant the seed for a mentoring relationship.
- There's no mentoring motivation within the organization. Gen Y subordinates should be more flexible in being available for senior leaders, says Burlington-based recruiter Claire Gibson. Try to find projects that you can collaborate on. Again, use your digital skills to turn boomers' heads.
- There's no one in the organization worth mentoring. This probably points to organizations that have poor mentoring cultures. Gen Y workers should try to find organizations that foster senior leaders who coach and guide. Ask during the interview process how the organization cultivates its mentors, says Gibson.

I was matched to this job by a machine?

Aggregator agitation. An applicant tracking system may be rushing through your resumé, but there are ways to slow the system down

JANE BORDEN
Metro World News in New York

The job application process is shifting due to applicant tracking systems, which are online resumé aggregators that many nonprofit and corporate entities are using to weed through candidates. Trudy Steinfeld, assistant vice president and executive director of the NYU Wasserman Center for Career Development, helps you navigate the new system:

Talk to the robots (mostly)

Do: Maximize keyword searching

"Say they're looking for a candidate who's detailed, can communicate and is a good editor," Steinfeld says. "When they get resumés, they'll search the system for those keywords. If you don't have those words on your resumé, even if those skills are displayed differently, your resumé is likely not to be identified."

Don't: Go overboard

"I recently heard an interesting story: There were 10 openings in this company and one person's resumé was identified with every keyword search, though the jobs were completely different. The candidate included keywords for every job, made the text white [so it was disguised] and put the resumé over [that text]. They tossed the resumé when they learned of the stunt.

Numbers game

Quantify your results

- "If you've worked on a project and there are quantifiable results, provide the numbers," she says. "Employers are into analytics; having an actual measure of your success can really help.

Old is new: Send a fax

"Especially when applying to small organizations, fax your resumé. Most offices still have a machine and — guess what? — it never rings," Steinfeld says. "I've noticed that in my own office, when the fax machine rings, people wonder, 'What could that be?' It could be your resumé. It sounds crazy, but the reality is, I test this out all the time with employers and they say, 'Yeah, if I get a resumé over the fax machine, I'm curious.' Say, 'I also sent this online, but I wanted to make sure it got into your hands.'"

MLB. Yankees overcome deficit for fourth straight game to record series sweep

On Sunday

Yankees	Blue Jays

The last time R.A. Dickey had been on a pitcher's mound in New York, Mets fans showered him with affection in September after he became the team's first 20-game winner in more than two decades.

When he returned Sunday with the last-place Toronto Blue Jays, he left dejected.

"Obviously I wish for a better result," he said after giving up a pair of home runs to the New York Yankees, who beat him 3-2 to complete a four-game sweep of the no-longer-fancied Blue Jays.

Dealt to Toronto after going 20-3 and winning the NL Cy Young Award, Dickey (2-4) already has lost more games this year than in all of 2012. The 38-year-old allowed three runs and four hits in seven innings, with four strikeouts and a walk. He's been slowed by soreness in his neck and back.

"If I have to battle it for a while, I'll battle it for a while until it goes away," he said. "It gets marginally better between starts. It's just that when I have to start it breaks down again."

Toronto (9-17) was swept in a four-game series in which it led every game for the first time since Sept. 19-21, 1995, at old Yankee Stadium. The Blue Jays were 4-for-24 with runners in scoring position in the series and struck out 37 times, including 13 Sunday.

"You want me to go out there and hit or something?" manager John Gibbons said. "I couldn't hit when I played."

Half of New York's hits on Sunday were homers.

Brennan Boesch sent a drive into the first row of the right-field seats in the second inning. After Toronto took a 2-1 lead against Phil Hughes on Lind's RBI single in the fourth and Izturis' run-scoring double off the base of the right-field wall in the sixth, the Yankees overcame a deficit for the fourth straight day when Lyle Overbay hit a two-run homer in the seventh. Early struggles

GM not yet in panic mode

Sunday was the Jays' 17th game decided by two or fewer runs. They've won only six of those close games.

"We're right in every game, we just can't get that big win," lamented manager John Gibbons.

Before Sunday's game, Jays GM Alex Anthopoulos said he's confident his team will turn things around.

"It's going to get better and I still expect us to be a contending team," Anthopoulos said when given an opportunity to convey a message to an anxious fan base.

It's not in Anthopoulos's nature to get riled up or panicky. The defence is improved, the bats are warming up, the team just needs to get on a roll, he said.

"Just based on players' careers, there's going to be improvement in a lot of areas and that's going to lead to more wins." TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Canada has ended four years of American dominance at the world under-18 men's hockey championship.

Frederik Gauthier's second-period goal stood as the winner as Canada rallied past the United States 3-2 to win the world title.

The Americans had a 2-1 lead at the midway point of the game and outshot the Canadians 35-12 altogether.

"The U.S. are defending champions and they have been in this tournament for four years," said assistant coach Jody Hull. "I think we were a bit nervous at the beginning and we weren't able to get out of it but we stuck with it, we stayed with what our focus was and stayed on the process.

"When we got opportunities we seemed to capitalize on them and our goaltender played great early to keep us in the game. That's what it's all about — a solid team effort from top to bottom."

Red Deer triumphs at Telus Cup

The Red Deer Chiefs are champions once again at the Telus Cup.

Matt Zentner made 27 saves as the Chiefs won for a second straight year at Canada's national midget hockey championship, 5-0 over the Ottawa Jr. 67's on Sunday in Sault Ste. Marie, Ont.

Red Deer opened the scoring with Chase Thudium scoring late in the first before the Chiefs took a commanding 4-0 lead in the second on goals from Trey Degraaf, Ryker Leer and Chris Garrie.

Red Deer advanced to the final after beating the Saskatoon Contacts 5-1 in the semifinal. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Marauders' Sewell to join Rams' Charles in Tennessee

McMaster Marauders offensive lineman Matt Sewell has signed a contract with the NFL's Tennessee Titans.

The six-foot-eight, 335-pound Sewell signed with the Titans late Saturday night after being bypassed in the NFL draft.

Sewell, of Milton, Ont., will join Regina Rams defensive tackle Stefan Charles with the Titans.

Charles, of Oshawa, Ont., also signed with Tennessee as a free agent on Saturday after not being selected in the draft.

Both Sewell and Charles are eligible for next month's CFL draft. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Heat light up Bucks in 4-0 sweep

NBA playoffs.
Miami earns milestone without Dwyane Wade, who will have at least a week to rest a bruised knee

LeBron James can cross another item off his to-do list.

James scored 30 points, Ray Allen had another big game against his old team and the Miami Heat got their first playoff sweep in the Big Three era, advancing to the Eastern Conference semifinals with an 88-77 victory over the Milwaukee Bucks on Sunday.

"It was our next big step as far as our growth," James said.

Faith in King James

"We just space the floor and see if they can stop him. If not, he knows where we are."

Miami Heat guard Ray Allen on his teammate LeBron James

"It's so hard to win on the road in the playoffs, in someone's building — especially when someone is playing for their last life. It's a big step for us."

And now the Heat have some much-needed time to rest. Dwyane Wade sat out Sunday's game, only the second post-season game he's missed in his career, because of his aching right knee. But with Miami not playing until next Saturday, at the earliest, he'll have plenty of time to treat the three bone bruises that caused him to miss six games near the end of the regular season.

Miami plays the winner of the Brooklyn-Chicago series. The Bulls lead that series 3-1, with Game 5 on Monday night in New York.

"It's big," Wade said of the time off. "Obviously, we're one of the oldest teams in the league, maybe the oldest team in terms of rotation players. Guys have some bumps and bruises coming out of this series, so it's going to be great to get some rest. But also we have to take this time to continue to stay sharp, to continue to stay in shape, as well."

Celtics vs. Knicks

Jason Terry scored Boston's last nine points and the Celtics weathered a strong comeback by the New York Knicks, avoiding a sweep with a 97-90 overtime win on Sunday.

- Paul Pierce led the Celtics with 29 points as they forced a fifth game in the series.
- Carmelo Anthony led the Knicks with 36 points.
- Game 5 is Wednesday night in New York, where the Knicks can win their first playoff series in 13 years.

Judging by the clinical way in which the Heat dissected the Bucks in this series, that isn't likely to be a problem.

The defending NBA champions won each game by double digits, getting contributions from their stars and subs alike. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Ailing Lakers bow out in Game 4

Tony Parker scored 23 points, and the San Antonio Spurs completed their first-round sweep of the injury-plagued Los Angeles Lakers with a 103-82 victory in Game 4 on Sunday night.

Tim Duncan had 11 points and six rebounds for the second-seeded Spurs, who will face the winner of Denver's series with Golden State in the second round. They'll get plenty of rest after flattening the Lakers, who finished without three regular starters in their first opening-round exit since 2007.

In his final game before unrestricted free agency, Dwight Howard scored seven points before getting ejected early in the third quarter for arguing.

Pau Gasol had 16 points for the Lakers, who were swept from the post-season for the second time in three years despite a late courtside appearance by Kobe Bryant on crutches. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NHL. Sens win finale to set up clash with Habs

Jean-Gabriel Pageau scored the tiebreaking goal with 3:34 to play and the Ottawa Senators beat Boston 4-2 on Sunday night in the NHL's rescheduled regular-season finale.

The victory gave the Senators the seventh seed for the Eastern Conference playoffs and a matchup with Montreal and dropped the New York Islanders into eighth and a first-round series against the Pittsburgh Penguins.

The Bruins, who could have won the Northeast Division and earned a No. 2 seed with a win, finish fourth; they will play Toronto in the first round. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Stars fill GM role with Nill: Source

The Dallas Stars have chosen Jim Nill to replace fired general manager Joe Nieuwendyk, a person familiar with the decision told The Associated Press.

The person spoke on condition of anonymity Sunday night because the move hadn't been announced.

Dallas fired Nieuwendyk on Sunday after four seasons with two coaches and no playoff appearances. The Stars finished their season 22-22-4 Saturday without earning a spot in the playoffs for the fifth season in a row.

Nill has helped the Detroit Red Wings extend their post-season streak to 22 straight appearances. He was Detroit's assistant general manager for 15 seasons and has worked for the franchise's front office since 1994.

The Stars have scheduled a news conference for Monday to announce their new general manager. The team has refused to comment on reports that Nill would be Nieuwendyk's replacement. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Horoscopes

♈ Aries
March 21 - April 20
It's not like you to be so openly affectionate but someone seems to have fired up your passion. Whatever the reason for the sudden upsurge of loving feelings it's something you should do more often.

♉ Taurus
April 21 - May 21
There are so many wonderful aspects operating in your favor now that all things are possible. Wishes you made in the past that came to nothing WILL come true this week.

♊ Gemini
May 22 - June 21
If you need to give your self-confidence a boost ask a friend what they think of your latest creative project. Most likely they will praise it to the skies and your ego will go through the roof too.

♋ Cancer
June 22 - July 23
What a loved one tells you today may be interesting but you would be wise not to take it too seriously. It could be that they have been mislead, so check the facts carefully.

♌ Leo
July 24 - Aug. 23
You could meet someone interesting today, but only if you make the effort to get out and about. You could also be the beneficiary of a stroke of good fortune you probably don't deserve.

♍ Virgo
Aug. 24 - Sept. 23
If you make a few small and apparently insignificant savings now you won't have to make so many major sacrifices later on. As a Virgo you are supposed to be organized.

♎ Libra
Sept. 24 - Oct. 23
Tell someone how you feel about them today — provided, of course, your feelings are warm and generous. Don't put it off a moment longer.

♏ Scorpio
Oct. 24 - Nov. 22
You may want to help a colleague who clearly is in need of assistance but if you have already helped them several times in the recent past maybe you should let them suffer. It may be the only way they learn.

♐ Sagittarius
Nov. 23 - Dec. 21
You are in an unusually loving mood at the moment and long may it continue. However, don't be so loving that you forget that not everyone shares your natural generosity.

♑ Capricorn
Dec. 22 - Jan. 20
You may be unsure of your abilities but others have faith in you and will go out of their way to show it today. If they ask you to get up in front of an audience be brave and do it.

♒ Aquarius
Jan. 21 - Feb. 19
You seem to be everyone's favorite Aquarius at the moment, but don't let it lull you into a false sense of security. You still have some big issues to deal with and some big rivals to overcome.

♓ Pisces
Feb. 20 - March 20
The next few days are going to be very busy indeed, not only in body but in mind as well. New ideas will grab your attention and new opportunities will tempt you to try something different. So try. SALLY BROMPTON
